Education Finance Partners Teams-Up with TG

Providing Greater Access for More Schools

SAN FRANCISCO – May 09, 2006 – Education Finance Partners, an innovative private education loan provider, announced that they are working with TG, one of the nation’s leading student loan guarantors, to give schools the ability to certify and disburse their private student loans using TG’s state-of-the-art technology. Schools working with Education Finance Partners can now certify their private loans through AdvanTG Web™, an open, Web-based loan management solution. Schools can also disburse Education Finance Partners Private Loans through TG’s EFT, a single CommonLine-compliant, electronic loan disbursement process.

In addition to TG, Education Finance Partners works with a variety of other industry partners to certify and disburse their loans to colleges and universities across the nation.

“Our goal is to provide schools with the choice of processing their private loans in the way that is easiest for them,” said Tamera Briones, Education Finance Partners Chief Executive Officer. “Working with TG opens the door to many new school relationships and allows us to significantly expand our footprint,” Briones added.

“I look forward to providing The University of Texas at Austin students a new choice for their educational loan options. Education Finance Partners is responding to needs not only of UT Austin students, but by others across the nation: alternatives to federal loans,” said Dr. Larry Burt, Associate Vice President for Student Affairs and Director of the Office of Student Financial Services at UT Austin.

Along with the University of Texas at Austin, TG and Education Finance Partners are already working together to support schools with seamless certification and disbursement transactions.
